Benefits of the release of the Creating Healthy Places Intervention Locations on Health Data NY

- The dataset state and community partners interested in community level approaches to address the obesity epidemic, heart disease and type 2 diabetes with data that shows how 22 funded counties across the state combine healthy eating and physical activity strategies to improve the overall health climate of both rural and urban communities.
- Interested parties can utilize the dataset to map strategies and combine the interventions by location with other data sets, notably U.S. Census data to describe types of obesity prevention interventions, where they are occurring, and based on geography whether high need communities are benefiting and the potential reach of that benefit.
